Factsheet on Dog Keeping in Germany

The most important stuff at one glance:

1. The use of any electrical devices for disciplinary purposes (electrical fence, anti-bark, collars with remote control) is not allowed.
2. It is not allowed to permanently keep a dog in a box; only two hours per day at the most.
3. Inside developed areas, dogs must be always kept on a leash. In the countryside you need to put the dog on a leash if somebody is approaching.
4. When unleashing your dog be mindful of local wildlife and hunting seasons. If your dog mauls a wild animal, it can be considered poaching and animal cruelty and will be heavily fined. Dogs mauling wild animals can legally be shot by hunters.
5. It is recommended that pet owners obtain liability insurance, which is available from commercial insurance companies. Usually, personal liability insurance is obtained in conjunction with pet liability insurance.
6. Certain dogs are considered “dangerous breeds” and cannot be imported to Germany except for very niche situations.
7. Pick up after your dog. Many places have free dog-poop-bag dispensers
8. All animal-shelters in Germany are non-kill.
9. U.S. Military Vets don't offer emergency services. Therefore, it is highly recommended to find a German vet for potential after-hours emergencies.

First Steps:

Pets do not have to be quarantined in Germany as long as they meet the entrance requirements. Your pet needs an ISO-compatible microchip, as well as a bilingual health certificate. It is important that this health certificate not be more than 10 days old, that the rabies vaccination is at least 21 days old, and that the microchip is implanted prior to the rabies vaccination.

Upon arrival or adoption of new pets, all pets living on and off-base, must be registered with the Kaiserslautern Veterinary clinic on Pulaski Barracks (Vogelweh Military Complex), Bldg. 2928 or another Military Veterinary Treatment Facility (i.e. Baumholder). Veterinary Services are appointment based only and emergency care is not available. Registration consists of maintaining a current medical record and a valid rabies certificate (for cats and dogs). If vaccines are given to your pet off-base, please bring proof of vaccination so we can update our records.

Get in contact via: usarmy.landstuhl.medcom-ph-e.mbx.vmce@health.mil

Veterinary Medical Center Europe: Monday to Friday, 7:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. (closed from 12:00 p.m. to 1:00 p.m. for lunch) by appointment only; DSN: 590-1900 or 06371-9464-1900.

Pet owners arriving at the Ramstein Passenger Terminal will be assessed a 55 Euro veterinarian examination fee in accordance with European Union Ordinance #998/2003. The fee will be charged per household, not per pet. The fee is not reimbursable on travelers' orders and will be payable by credit card only.

General Advice:

"People keeping, caring or having to care for an animal are not allowed to limit the animal's opportunity for species-specific movement in a way that the animal suffers from pain, diseases or injuries. "

This is what the 'German Animal Protection Law' says to be applicable for all animals kept as pets. If this law is violated a prison sentence of up to three years or fines of up to €25.000 will be imposed. Observing the characteristic needs of a dog when keeping him indoors thus includes proper exercise. A dog kept indoor should be taken out for a walk several times a day (at least one hour per day).

It is not allowed to chain up the dog within the apartment or keep him locked in a separate room. Balconies, basement rooms or the bathroom are not right places to keep a dog. To sleep and to rest the animal needs a clean, draft-free place where he will not be disturbed. A clean feeding bowl and a well-filled water are must. A dog is not at all a garbage chute. Spiced and salted food is harmful to animals. The right food for pets is offered by a variety of department stores and special shops (pet stores I).

A dog needs attention care and, what is very important, caress.

Those who offer their dog a home including the above requirements will be rewarded with the devotion and thankfulness of the animal. For dogs not kept indoors, the "regulation on keeping dogs outside" is to be observed. If you choose to keep your dog in a kennel or chained up, you should become familiar with this regulation.

Finally, we would like to emphasize those shortcomings in the keeping of animals detected by our animal protection commissioners will be denounced.

Use of Leashes:

The Office of Public Order reminds dog owners that they need to always keep their dogs on a leash inside developed areas in community limits. Outside developed areas, dogs must be automatically put on a leash in case of other persons approaching. Violations against these rules may be punished by fines up to €5,000.

Cleaning up:

Furthermore, the pollution of public places, in particular parks and playgrounds, with dog feces is on the rise creating a health hazard particularly to children as well as a nuisance to the inhabitants as well as the community workers required to clean the litter.

Dog Barking:

Barking has to be kept at a minimum. During quiet hours between 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m., dog owners must ensure neighbors are not disturbed by barking, whining or howling. Outside these hours, dog owners must ensure dog noises do not last longer than 10 minutes in a row, respectively exceed 30 minutes cumulatively per day. If necessary, the dogs have to be kept inside the house in accordance with animal protection laws.

To Run Free or Not:

Pets are not allowed to run free, and if they do so, the owner may be held liable for any bodily injuries or property damage that the pet may cause. German law imposes strict liability on the owner for damages, regardless of whether the pet is in the possession of the owner, lost, or abandoned. Therefore, it is recommended that pet owners obtain liability insurance, which is available from commercial insurance companies. Usually, personal liability insurance is obtained in conjunction with pet liability insurance.

Abuse/Neglect:

Allegations of abuse or neglect are normally made to the security police or military police. An investigation will be conducted, and the owner may be charged with pet neglect under the UCMJ. The unit commander or supervisor will take appropriate administrative or disciplinary action, to include disposition of the pet, if appropriate. If you live on the economy, you may also have to appear before an investigator, who will notify you of the charges and your rights. Pet abandonment is not condoned in Germany. Service members caught neglecting or abandoning their pet will be disciplined.

German Rules on Dangerous Dogs

In April 2001, German law was passed on import of dangerous dogs for protection of the citizens. The local offices of public order (OPO) at city and county level are appointed to enforce the dangerous dog regulation.

Dangerous dogs are defined as animals either

- known to be vicious
- having indicated inclinations to attack game or livestock
- having attacked persons
- having shown unusually aggressiveness

Automatically included are Pit Bull Terriers, American Staffordshire Terriers, and Staffordshire Bullterriers and dogs descendant from one of these dogs.

Some German states have included addition dog breeds in the definition. However, Rhineland-Palatinate – the state were Kaiserslautern, Ramstein-Miesenbach, Landstuhl and Baumholder are located – only includes the above-mentioned breeds. If you fly into Germany, you will not have to comply with the list of the state of the airport, but the list of the state you will live in.

These races and any dogs deriving from these races cannot be imported to Germany. Breeding, reproduction, and trade of dangerous dogs are prohibited. The responsible authority may order the dog to be neutered. Dogs may not be trained or bred to become dangerous dogs.

Permission by the local authority is required to keep a dangerous dog. The owner must justify the need to keep the dog, for example as a watch dog. Furthermore, the owner must be at least 18 years of age and personally qualified. Personal qualification requires passing an aptitude test administered by a person or office certified by the State Veterinarian Chamber. This test is only valid for 5 years and only connected to the dog that is tested together with the owner.

Certain criteria automatically disqualify persons to own dangerous dogs:

- final conviction for at least one crime committed with premeditation or twice for crimes committed while drunk within the last 5 years
- addiction to alcohol or drugs, or mental illness or impairment
- repeated violation of dangerous dog legal provisions

Dangerous dogs must be kept safely. They must be marked with an electronic chip applied by a veterinarian. The dog owner must show proof thereof to the local authority. Furthermore, if the dog is lost or given into somebody else's custody for more than 4 weeks the owner must notify the local authority.

In public areas, including common areas in multi-family housing such as stairwells, dangerous dogs must be on a leash and wear a muzzle. Dog owners may ask for an exemption to wear a muzzle if the dog poses no danger to public security. Persons walking dogs in public must be 18 years or older, physically able to control the dog and not disqualified. A person may only walk one dog at a time.
