Commanding Officer's Lines of Effort

Defend The Base

Camp Lemonnier is a warfighting platform and vital link to building stability in Africa. As the only forward and enduring U.S. military installation in Africa, we provide operational support to five COCOMs. CLDJ is a critical hub in the EURAFCENT Region, we must protect it!

Enable The Joint Fight Forward

Camp Lemonnier is the springboard from which we sustain our forces and strengthen our warfighting readiness ensuring we can rapidly and effectively employ units forward to achieve the mission when called on to act. We must be ruthless in evaluating our operational readiness and our ability to fight tonight alongside other U.S. Government departments, our host nation of Djibouti, and our international partners.

Protect Our Teammates

Every warfighter on Camp is essential to mission success-no one stands alone in this fight. We must foster ethical resilience and built spiritual readiness within ourselves and our units. Hold yourself and those around you to the highest standards, always striving for excellence. Look out for and take care of each other. Together, we strengthen and fortify the warfighting team.

Where is Djibouti?

The Republic of Djibouti is a small, mostly desert country located on the northeast coast of the Horn of Africa.

It is bordered to the north by Eritrea and the Red Sea, to the east by the Gulf of Tadjoura - which opens to the Gulf of Aden, to the south by Somalia and to the west by Ethiopia.

History

Djibouti, formerly known as French Somaliland from 1896-1967 and the French Territory of the Afars and Issas from 1967-1977, gained its independence from France on June 27, 1977.

The two largest ethnic groups are Somalis, who are concentrated in the capital and to the south and Afars, who live in the sparsely populated areas to the west and north. More than two-thirds of the populace lives in the capital, Djibouti City. Djibouti was once grazing land for the Afar and Issa tribes. The Muslim Afars fought many wars with the Christian Ethiopians between the 13th and 17th centuries. In 1862, an Afar treaty with France ensured a European economic and territorial foothold.

In 1946, France declared the area an overseas territory and in 1967 it became the French Territory of the Afars and the Issas. The Issa people repeatedly rejected French rule, while the Afar took a more pro-France stance. In 1977, after massive demonstrations and the rise of the colony's first interethnic party, France granted Djibouti independence.

Djibouti in the 21st Century

On May 8, 1999, President Ismael Omar Guelleh took office. The President has committed himself to reaching out to all sectors of Djiboutian society, to transparency, and to modernizing the government to attain economic and social development.

In 2002, the United States established Camp Lemonnier, its only permanent military base in Africa. Over the years, Djibouti has attracted major investments in its port and in its service sectors and has become a regional leader.

Today, Djibouti is investing heavily in its people. A third of Djibouti's national budget is dedicated to education and health. The challenges Djibouti faces is to increase regional stability and growth while ensuring its people benefit from the influx of new jobs and opportunities for entrepreneurship.

Camp Lemonnier History

Camp Lemonnier is located on the southwest side of the Djibouti-Ambouli International Airport. Originally, CLDJ belonged to the artillery of the French 5th Overseas Task Force (5th RIAOM). After use by the 5th RIAOM, the facility was operated by the Djiboutian Armed Forces.

Following the attacks on September 11, 2001, the U.S. Government created Combined Joint Task Force-Horn of Africa (CJTF-HOA) to conduct stability operations in the Horn of Africa. In November 2002, the CJTF-HOA staff, a Marine-based organization, arrived off the coast of Djibouti onboard USS Mount Whitney (LCC-20). In May 2003, CJTF-HOA transitioned from the Mount Whitney to Camp Lemonnier, moving all headquarters personnel and equipment ashore.

The United States Marine Corps turned over responsibility of Camp Lemonnier to the U.S. Navy on July 1, 2006. In January 2007, the U.S. and Djiboutian governments announced that a lease agreement had been signed to expand Camp Lemonnier from 88 acres to nearly 500 acres. With the additional land, CLDJ improved the living conditions for its personnel, installing containerized living units (CLUs) along with concrete sidewalks and gravel roads. This drastically improved quality of life as people moved from tents to CLUs.

In October of 2008, Camp Lemonnier was realigned in support of U.S. Africa Command (USAFRICOM). However, Commander, Navy Region Europe, Africa, Central still runs operations of the base and is responsible for upkeep, logistical support, and expansion.

In May of 2014, President Obama and Djiboutian President Guelleh agreed on a 20-year extension (+10 year option) of the American lease.

Camp Lemonnier is the only enduring U.S. military site in Africa. CLDJ supports 32 tenant commands pursuing a wide array of missions in a crowded operating environment consisting of the U.S., France, Spain, Italy, Germany, Japan, and China.

Looking to the Future

Camp Lemonnier is not formally an installation. The command is comprised of a mixture of Active and Reserve Individual Augmentees, with the majority on 9-month orders. About 60% of the Individual Augmentees are Reserve.

CLDJ supports Combined Joint Task Force - Horn of Africa (CJTF-HOA) and other tenant commands protecting United States interests in Africa and provides full spectrum individual support to personnel stationed on Camp Lemonnier.

Throughout its history, Camp Lemonnier has evolved and adapted to ever increasing mission demands. There are still many chapters that remain unwritten as the installation positions itself for the challenges of the future. You will be a part of writing those chapters and play an important role in maintaining peace and stability in the region.
