School Liaison Roles and Responsibilities

A U.S. Navy School Liaison is a professional who serves as the primary link between Navy families, commands, local schools and districts, and the military community. Their main goal is to help military families navigate the unique challenges of transitioning into and out of different school systems due to frequent relocations and deployments.

Support with School Transitions:

- Assist families with enrolling children in new schools.
- Provide information about local school options (public, private, charter, homeschooling, etc.).
- Help families understand school policies, curricula, and requirements, especially when moving between states or countries.

Advocate for Educational Success:

- Ensure military children receive the appropriate support and accommodations in schools.
- Help families address issues like Individualized Education Programs (IEPs), advanced placement classes, or gifted education programs.

Facilitate Communication:

- Act as a bridge between military families and schools to resolve conflicts or concerns.
- Provide school administrators with insights about the unique needs of military-connected students.

Provide Resources and Referrals:

- Offer workshops, training, and resources for parents, students, and educators.
- Refer families to additional support programs, such as counseling or tutoring services.

Build Community Partnerships:

- Work with local education agencies, community organizations, and military commands to improve the quality of life and education for military children.

Why Would Someone Need a School Liaison?

- ⇒ Frequent Relocations: Military families often move every 2-3 years, which can disrupt a child's education. School Liaisons help smooth these transitions.
- ⇒ Understanding Educational Differences: Different states and countries have varying academic standards, graduation requirements, and special education processes. A liaison can help clarify these differences.
- ⇒ Accessing Military-Specific Resources: They connect families to scholarships, military youth programs, and other resources tailored for military-connected students.
- ⇒ Navigating Emotional and Academic Challenges: Deployments, long separations, and other stressors can affect students. Liaisons provide support and connect families to counseling or other assistance, including transition and resiliency programs.
- ⇒ Advocating for Military Families: If a family encounters difficulties with schools (e.g., credit transfer, deployment-related absences), the liaison can advocate on their behalf.

Additional Duties to Enhance School Liaison Effectiveness

Supporting Deployment-Related Needs:

- Workshops and Training: Organize programs for educators and parents to help them understand the emotional and academic impact of deployment on children.
- Resilience Support: Collaborate with school counselors and psychologists to provide resilience-building resources for students facing deployment-related challenges.

Promoting Awareness of Military Child Issues:

- Education Outreach: Educate school staff about the challenges faced by military families, such as frequent relocations, changes in academic standards, and social adjustment.
- Month of the Military Child: Lead events and initiatives during April to celebrate and recognize the contributions of military children.

Crisis Response and Assistance:

- Emergency Support: Assist schools and families during crises, such as natural disasters or unexpected relocations, ensuring students' education and well-being remain uninterrupted.
- Bereavement Support: Help schools and families manage sensitive situations, such as the loss of a service member, by connecting them to appropriate resources.

Coordinating with Installation Services:

- Partnerships with Base Programs: Work with Fleet and Family Support Centers, Youth Centers, and other base services to create a comprehensive support network for families.
- Joint Efforts with Commands: Provide briefings to military commands on school-related concerns, ensuring leadership is informed and engaged.

Monitoring and Reporting:

- Tracking Educational Trends: Monitor trends affecting military children, such as graduation rates, absenteeism, or disciplinary actions, and report data to Navy leadership.
- Feedback Collection: Gather and relay input from families to improve educational services and advocate for changes when needed.

Supporting Special Needs Students:

- EFMP Coordination: Assist families enrolled in the Exceptional Family Member Program (EFMP) with finding appropriate educational accommodations and services for children with special needs.
- Facilitating Transitions: Ensure smooth handoffs between schools for special needs students, including coordinating IEP or 504 plan transfers.

Encouraging Parent and Student Involvement:

- Providing support, resources, referrals, materials, ideas and opportunities.

CULTURAL

OBSERVANCE

NATIONAL DISABILITY EMPLOYMENT AWARENESS MONTH

ACCESS TO GOOD JOBS FOR ALL

National Disability Employment Awareness Month (NDEAM) recognizes the contributions by those with disabilities who make our Nation great.

Led by the U.S. Department of Labor's Office (DOL) of Disability Employment Policy, NDEAM reaffirms the Department of Defense's (DoD) commitment to recruit and advance disabled individuals throughout its workforce. The DOL has chosen the theme, "Access to Good Jobs for All."

People with disabilities are part of a diverse group that includes people with sensory, physical, and mental conditions. Disabilities cross the lines of age, ethnicity, sex, race, sexual orientation, and socioeconomic status.

Almost everyone is likely to experience some form of disability—temporary or permanent—at some point in their life.

Do you know about Olmstead v. L.C.?

Olmstead v. L.C. is considered the most important Supreme Court case for disabled members' civil rights. 2024 marks the 25th anniversary of this key decision, which expanded the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and bolstered the independent living movement.

The case was brought by Lois Curtis and Elaine Wilson after they were kept in Georgia mental institutions despite being recommended for community-based treatment.

As a result of neglect towards them, attorney Sue Jamieson filed a lawsuit on their behalf against the Georgia Department of Human Resources.

At the Supreme Court, the justices ruled in favor of the women, asserting that they had been unfairly segregated into institutions alongside others with disabilities.

The ruling specified that individuals with disabilities had the right to receive treatment in integrated settings if they choose, with their doctors' approval, and provided that the accommodations are reasonable. In the years since, the Olmstead decision has served as the basis of several other decisions that have increased the rights of disabled individuals.

Olmstead v. L.C. has allowed disabled individuals greater autonomy and freedom from discrimination. It tested the strength of the ADA and has served as the bedrock for Federal Government policies in providing opportunities for independent living and employment.

Nobody should be held back from access to job opportunities because of a disability. People with disabilities offer important, unique perspectives that can make the workplace, and our Nation at large, better. The DoD recognizes this and strives to build an inclusive workforce for total force readiness.

HUMAN FACTORS AT WORK: GETTING TO THE REAL BOTTOM OF OCCUPATIONAL MISHAPS

LACK OF ATTENTION TO DETAIL: WHAT, NOT A WHY

CY17 data in ESAMS cites "Lack of Attention to Detail" 35%, followed by "Other" 28%, as Primary Cause Codes (PCC), for nearly 63% of all 5845 valid mishaps. Likewise, they account for 41% of secondary and 26% of tertiary cause codes.

But are those really the leading causes? Perhaps more can be gleaned from investigating WHY someone was inattentive.

Research indicates that this is indicative of circular thinking, e.g.

Q: Why did the driver fail to see the pedestrian?

A: Because the driver was inattentive.

Q: How do we know the driver was inattentive?

A: Because the driver failed to see the pedestrian.¹

The better questions are, "WHY was the driver inattentive?" Was there a distraction outside the car? Was the driver daydreaming? Was the driver sneezing? Was the driver aware of the pedestrian, even subconsciously? Those questions are more revealing than stopping at the summary event.

Don't let your lack of attention to detail hamper your investigation.

Every incident is a notice that something is wrong with men, methods or material. Investigate, then act.

Unknown

A POUND OF PREVENTION

If you could prevent a mishap, would you? Fully 9% of mishaps are due to some sort of supervisory failure, whether it be untrained personnel doing a job, or a lack of communication in some part of the process. Protecting your people is part of your job. Supervise!

Statistically, there are more injuries per day and with the most lost time in June through August; remind your people to be extra vigilant and more cautious. Most fractures occur December through February.² Look around and ensure walkways are being shoveled, ice melt spread where needed and have cleats available.

Look at and compare statistics; the trends become the leading indicators where preventive actions can mitigate the circumstances which allow injuries to occur. Yes, everyone should pay attention to the walking surface, but snow can hide lifted sidewalks, introducing trip hazards. If there are seven slip/trip/fall mishaps each winter, perhaps there should be an initiative to identify and mark the frost-raised sections of sidewalks for visual awareness.

Extra daylight allows for extended outdoor work hours, where fatigue and heat stress can occur. Summer also brings about a temporary workforce; are they being trained on hazards and expected procedures they will face for summer employment?

Temporary workers are also present at winter holiday times as well as summer breaks. OSHA has resources available for temporary workers at www.osha.gov/temp_workers/index.html.

What do 3-year olds and good mishap investigators have in common? They both ask, "Why?" a lot.

DON'T DISREGARD DESIGN DETAILS

In our homes, how often do we flip the wrong switch on a panel? Upstairs light vs. downstairs? Garbage disposal vs. light? Often there no logic to switch order or placement, or it is contrary to what we have "always" known.

How many may have had problems with these symbols?

Is that round thing Open (as in circuit=off) or Open (as in an eye=on)? Or is it O for On? The line seems like less of something, as in not operating or off, or like a shut eye, opposite of open. Many are relieved that the combined icon is a simple on/off button vs. an on/off switch.

It is that sort of small detail that seems like a minor point, but can cause serious consequences in operational environments.

Don't overlook design elements just because "that is the way it is."
